Travelling Home-Binding Project to Shinshu, the Heartland of Japan's Rope Culture

Home-binding is a new type of Jomon style art, where a home is bound crosswise with rope by the family who lives there and their friends, leaving memories and traces. It is a contemporary art expression with ancient roots that links different cultures and transmits the traditional Japanese spirit of coexistence to the wider world. This time, we will travel from Tokyo along the Koshu Kaido to the Suwa region, the heartland of Japanese rope culture, binding homes and creating memories and traces of rope along the way.
